NO STEP BACKWARD.

If the President's Message can be accepted as an indication of his party's policy, the Democracy is to take no backward step. Having cast aside the advice of time-servers and traitors and planted itself firmly on the constitutional principles of Jefferson and Jackson, that unnecessary taxation is the plunder of the people under the flimsy cover of assumed law, the Democratic party is to continue to occupy that patriotic and lofty ground, and to appeal to the good sense of an enlightened country for approval.

That is right. There is every reason why the party should be well satisfied with its position. In the recent election it was endorsed by a majority of the electors of the United States. Gov. HILL, who championed the MILLIS bill in all his speeches during an active campaign, was elected in New York by an increased vote, and with New York the Democracy obtained a majority in the States large enough to have elected a President entirely acceptable to the party.

It is creditable to Mr. CLEVELAND that he adheres so firmly to the true Democratic doctrine of honest taxation and a fair and equal tariff for the support of the Government. But it is to be regretted that he did not make the issue he now so vigorously justifies two years before the recent election.

WHERE THE CREDIT BELONGS.

Passengers on the new, convenient and handsome Twenty-third Street Railroad cars, when interviewed yesterday and asked to what influence they attributed the banishment of the bobtail, answered with singular unanimity, "To THE EVENING WORLD."

While appreciating the high compliment we are not desirous of taking to ourselves more credit than is justly our own due. The city press with insignificant exceptions has been our ally in the attacks on the abominable bobtail system. Especial credit is to be given Coroner MANNING for the intelligence and firmness with which he pressed the inquiry into the causes of the fatal accident to Mrs. LAY, and to that prosecution the change of system on the Twenty-third street line is in a great measure due. THE EVENING WORLD did all in its power to strengthen the Coroner's hands, and certainly is justified in claiming proper credit for its share in creating that public opinion which made the proceedings so successful and effective.

MOTHER-IN-LAW AND BICYCLES.

ASHLEY B. JOHNSON, who was arrested at Canandaigua yesterday charged with stealing a bicycle, is a smart youth for one who counts only twenty birthday anniversaries. He married a young wife when he ought to have been at school, and at once plunged into water made hot by a mother-in-law. He alleges that it was by the mother-in-law that he was driven to evil habits, but that excuse will scarcely be accepted as valid. He stole a bicycle, and if he had simply committed the theft to fly away—or rather to wheel away and be at rest, his pious in extension might be good. But the fact is that he sold the bicycle to obtain money with which to play draw poker. Besides, he also made free with a horse and afterwards with a horse and buggy, and three times broke jail and escaped when arrested for his offenses.

So we can see no good reason why ASHLEY should not suffer the penalty of the law for his misdeeds. His pious of too much mother-in-law should not save him from a taste of criminal law.

The men who told PHIL DALY to "hold up his hands" mistook their customer. PHIL is good at calling other people's hands, but not in throwing up his own. It is a pity that the sturdy and fearless "sport" was not supplied with a gun. Had he been the men who attacked him would never have been tried.

On the subject of Civil-Service Reform, which gave so much interest to the opening of Mr. CLEVELAND's Administration, the President says in his message—bless us, we cannot find the paragraph. Never mind, we will defer comments on what he says till our next issue.

OUR AUTOGRAPH COLLECTION.

Old Gentleman (earnestly)—Young man, do you know that in drinking whiskey you should use great caution?
Young Man—I do use great caution, sir. I never yet took a drink out of that dear old flask that I didn't look around to see what kind of a crowd I was in. Take a small sip, my friend, the goods will make an old woman with the minute feel happy.

"Polly, you remind me of the mirror you are looking into."
"Why so?"
"Because you are a good looking-glass."

Reversing the Process.

Wigshall—Ah, good morning, doctor; I understand you were called to Chicago to amputate a young lady's foot?
Dr. Farnon—You are slightly mistaken. I amputated the young lady.

Sea Showers Not Wanted.

Flatley—It's raining, boys!
De Pieter—Oh, well, never mind that, Flatie, old sox; but if it gets to raining girls, please notify me!

Embarrassed.

Mrs. Brown—Tell me, Nellie, was your husband much embarrassed when he proposed to you?
Mrs. Tompkins—Not nearly so much as he was after the bills for our wedding reception came in.

Giving Himself Away.

"One of you boys has been stealing raisins again; I have found the seeds on the floor. Which one of you was it?"
Tommy—I wasn't me. I swallowed the seeds in mine.

A Good Mixture.

Mrs. Alexander Tulliver, of Frankfort, Kentucky, claims to have been cured of paralysis by "faith, electricity and good Bourbon whiskey." The proportions in which the ingredients were taken is not mentioned.

Senator Evaria's Wits.

The death of the elder Mumm recalls Senator Evaria's comparison of the administrations of the silent Grant and the testotaller Hayes. "In the former," he said, "it was 'Mumm's cabinet, but ours is 'extra dry.'"

Attended To.

Smith (to Milkman)—I'll have to ask you to chalk it up.
Milkman (abstractedly)—Oh, that's all been attended to—has been your pardon; certainly, take your own time.

A Prelude to Winter.

O joyful days of Winter, when the time of both point fantastic fro-walk on the pane. When clouds in white are every sunny lane which we were wont to tread in summer-time. When with the breeze the wide play pantomime. When late increases, and when sorrows wane. When Nature, breathing a melodious strain fills full the life with a merry chime. But joyful days of Winter, let me say That thou hast other charms—it is not nice To fall head first down a toboggan track—Doth it not make a mortal feel quite gay To break ungently through the treacherous Or feel a snowball trailing down his back?

He Knew Where She Halted From.

She tripped into Macy's one day last week, saved herself from falling by a strenuous effort, attended to at the house-furnishing counter. "I'd like to see the braisers," she said. They were produced, and after carefully looking them over she selected one and remarked, "The bars on this seem to be a bit apart for cashing, but I think it will answer. Can you certainly, madam," responded the clerk, "the next express for Pittsburgh leaves in half an hour."

WORLDLINGS.

Mrs. Morton's eldest daughter, Edith, is a young lady of fifteen. She is described as a very pretty girl, with an excellent education and many graces of manner.

Preparations that are being made for the Chinese Emperor's marriage, which will take place next February, indicate that it will be a most gorgeous affair. It is estimated that the entire amount of the bills His Oriental Majesty will have to foot will be not less than $10,000,000.

A. H. Colquitt, who has been re-elected to the United States Senate from Georgia, is now sixty-four years old. He is a large, handsome man of impressive appearance and is known in the councils of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a Princeton graduate and has a fortune of about $500,000.

Charles S. Dressel, a stenographer, who died in Chicago a few days ago, was the "official" reporter of the mediums in Chicago, and took all the reports of spiritual communications at their seances.

MISS GILLETTE CAUGHT THEM ALL.

The Vermont School Teacher Played the Democrat and Republican Alike.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)

BOSTON, Dec. 4.—Here is a letter from Taunton to a morning paper:

After reading your account in this morning's paper concerning the success of Miss Gillette, of Randolph, Vt., would beg leave to state that I am another "nigger" in the turkey business. Miss G.'s note in my paper, though accidentally destroyed, is still fresh in my memory. It was political and in sympathy with "Grover and the Democrats."

If Mayor O'Brien had received my turkey, he might have added a diamond ring to his gold watch.

For my part I played the "chump" to the value of a pair of gold-plated earrings, and would give the turkey to the first man who could shut the mouths of my numerous friends who are calling me "chump" and "nigger."

It was a note in my paper, though accidentally destroyed, is still fresh in my memory. It was political and in sympathy with "Grover and the Democrats."

A PUBLIC SERVICE.

It Was "The Evening World" that Knocked Out the Juggernaut.

Passengers on the New Cars Agree in This Verdict.

It Was a Good Fight and a Victory Well Won.

AN EVENING WORLD reporter boarded half a dozen cars on the Twenty-third street line this morning to learn just what the people thought of the new regime, and to whom was due the credit for the change.

Twenty-two passengers were interviewed by the reporter. They were chiefly well-dressed and solid-looking business men, and to the question, "Do you think THE EVENING WORLD is entitled to the credit for having removed the bobtail cars from this road?" the answer in fifteen of the twenty-two cases was: "Indeed I do."

Dr. Henry V. Weldon, of 404 West Forty-seventh street, was the first man spoken to. The question mentioned above was fired at second range, and promptly came the answer: "Indeed I do. These cars fill a long-felt want, and I think THE EVENING WORLD deserves the credit."

F. R. Edwards, in business at 28 West Twenty-third street, said: "If people had to ride on these cars as much as I do they would thank THE EVENING WORLD for giving us this change. I give THE EVENING WORLD full credit."

J. W. Rosenthal, of 3704 Eighth avenue, said: "THE EVENING WORLD deserves more credit than anybody, and I wish it would follow up its good work and abolish all the bobtails."

F. M. Darracott, of 35 Broadway, said: "I think all the papers deserve our thanks, but THE EVENING WORLD is entitled to the lion's share. I wish it would tackle the other roads."

J. Kraushaar, of 383 1/2 Division street, said: "It is a great improvement. I give THE EVENING WORLD credit." "I know that I do," said John Claremont, of 218 West Twenty-third street, said: "The credit, no doubt, belongs to THE EVENING WORLD. I think that paper for its successful efforts to give us better cars."

Dr. M. A. Lewis, lately connected with the Homeopathic Hospital, said: "Most assuredly the credit belongs to THE EVENING WORLD. I don't see who else could claim it."

Dr. Lewis's friend, Mr. C. F. Holcomb, of Southington, Conn., said: "I don't know what the doctor has told me, 'THE EVENING WORLD' must be a great power."

The reporter coincided with Mr. Holcomb's views and then tackled F. P. Bassett, of 80 Jerusalem street, Brooklyn. He said: "I don't know what your paper made a big fight and deserves credit for it."

A. E. Aldridge, of Fishkill Landing, on the Hudson, reads THE EVENING WORLD every day. Said he: "I have watched the progress of the fight, and surely THE EVENING WORLD is entitled to all the credit. The placing of these cars on the road will doubtless save many lives."

Albert Meyer, with the Denham Thompson company, said: "THE EVENING WORLD must take the credit. There is no other paper that can claim it."

L. H. Cohen, of 925 Lexington avenue, was asked to give the victory to THE EVENING WORLD. He said: "THE EVENING WORLD deserves an extraordinary amount of credit, and I am pleased to express my opinion."

John J. O'Brien, of 236 Seventh avenue, said: "I read THE EVENING WORLD, and know that it can claim the credit justly. It made a noble fight."

Herman Lichtenstein, of 25 West Houston street, said: "TO THE EVENING WORLD the credit is due. These cars are a great blessing. Other papers must not steal the credit, as I see they are trying to do."

John Moran, of 54 Jackson street, thought THE EVENING WORLD made a great paper. "It is understanding and deserves credit for what it has done."

Joseph Noone, of 310 Hart street, Brooklyn, said that he had heard that THE EVENING WORLD had compelled the jiggers to be taken off.

Thomas J. Caslin, of 245 Third avenue, said: "Any enterprising paper deserves credit. As the most enterprising THE EVENING WORLD deserves it."

Others concurred in the above opinions, but modestly declined giving their names. There seems to be no doubt in the public mind as to what paper the credit is due. It is understanding and deserves credit for what it has done.

Aside from the newspaper work in this matter, however, it should be remembered that Coroner Manning did a vast deal of good service for the people. It was his able and energetic assistance that enabled THE EVENING WORLD to successfully push its good fight.

NO VOICE TO TELL HER WOES.

A Homeless Dear Mute Girl Found Wand'ring in the Streets.

Matron Webb has a deaf-and-dumb girl of eighteen who was found wandering on West Fourth street at night by Policemen Kellen, of the Charles street station. When taken to Police Headquarters last night she wept and appeared to be very much afraid.

She slept well and took some milk and cake for breakfast this morning. Pointing to her needle-pricked fingers the helpless girl gave a notice that she was accustomed to sewing. She was dressed in a brown check dress, a red nigger-head jersey, a blue cloth wrap, lined with red flannel, a navy blue hat, trimmed with dark navy blue ribbon and a white bird wing.

No Bar Allowed on Barnum's Premises.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)

BALTIMORE, Conn., Dec. 4.—An interesting lawsuit has been brought by Levi A. Hancock against P. T. Barnum for possession of the Pequanook Hotel, at East Bridgeport. In renting his many public buildings Mr. Barnum inserts an iron-clad stipulation that no liquor shall be sold on the premises.

In this case, however, this clause was omitted, and Mr. Hancock proposed to run a bar in connection with the hotel. Mr. Barnum on hearing this notified the present tenant, David P. Hill, to prevent Hancock from taking possession, and he (Barnum) would back him up. Some interesting legal points are expected when the suits come to trial.

Is There a Corner in Coffee?

The coffee market this morning opened strong and excited. After closing barely steady last night traders were thrown into a pitch of excitement by the sharp advance over night. Near months advanced from 65 to 80 points, while last night's advance went beyond, some as high as 125 points over last night's quotations. Cables were strong, and the advance to the advance received from Java the market in that city was equally strong.

Cowie had been under the influence of liquor for several days.

"LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY."

ALMOST THE CRIME OF CAIN.

That Which Is Charged Against Charles W. Green.

The trial of Charles W. Green for the murder of Nicholas Goldenkirch in the hallway of 108 Rodney street, Brooklyn, on March 26 last, was continued this morning before Judge Moore and a jury in the Court of Sessions, Brooklyn.

Goldenkirch had been forbidden by Green to call upon the latter's sister, who was sick at the house. He persisted in calling, however, and on the day given above he had met Green in the hallway.

There was an altercation, parties in the house heard a noise, and Goldenkirch was found dying from a pistol wound. Of what had taken place there were no witnesses.

It subsequently transpired that Goldenkirch and Miss Green had been married in 1882. Green had claimed that he was protecting his sister's honor.

Green was in court this morning, and sat in front of the iron pillar facing Judge Moore. He was dressed in a black corkscrew Prince Albert coat, dark striped trousers and a heavy overcoat. He was composed, and looked each witness squarely in the face.

The first witness called by Assistant District-Attorney Clarke was Annie E. Dunn, of 55 Clinton avenue. She said she was a professional nurse and attended Mrs. Goldenkirch at the time of the shooting. She said she had seen Goldenkirch in the sick woman's room on the Thursday night previous to the shooting. He came in about 10 o'clock and left late.

The next night Goldenkirch called again. Mrs. Goldenkirch was in bed, and the dead man was in conversation with her. Green entered and ordered Goldenkirch to leave. The witness asked why Goldenkirch shouldn't remain, and was put off with an evasive answer. They then left the room.

After they had left she heard a loud conversation between Green and Goldenkirch, who were in the hallway. She couldn't hear what was said, but distinguished Goldenkirch's voice above the other.

The next night was Saturday night and Goldenkirch called about 9 o'clock. He called the next day, Sunday, at 2 o'clock, and remained until 10 o'clock. Mr. Miller, a friend of Goldenkirch's, was with him, and they stayed in the sick-room.

On Monday night she saw Green in the basement. About 8 o'clock she heard the bell ring. The witness was in the front basement in company with Green. When the bell rang Green went upstairs.

"What did you next hear?"

A sound like the shutting of the door."

Witness heard a whistle through the tube and went to the parlor floor. She saw Green at the head of the stairs, starting down. She asked him if he was crazy and he said, "I think I am."

She saw no weapon in Green's hands. She saw Goldenkirch lying with his head towards the parlor door and feet towards the stairs. He was lying on his back and bleeding from the temple.

The morning after the shooting a brother of the deceased handed to witness a pistol, which she gave to Mr. Miller that afternoon. The pistol was in a box, and the witness could not say whether it was new or old.

George P. Goldenkirch, the deceased man's brother, was next called. He was shown a page in a book and asked whether it contained his brother's handwriting. He said he thought it was.

The book contained the marriage certificate of Goldenkirch and Green's sister. It was dated May 23, 1882.

Otto Rosenfeld testified to selling a pistol to George Goldenkirch, the dead man's brother, on the day after the shooting. He spoke of the murder and asked the direction of Rodney street. The impression that was sought to be made was that the boy had bought the pistol to shoot his brother's slayer.

FLAGMAN WOLVER'S HEROIC DEED.

His Own Life Lost in Saving Two Girls From Death at Herkimer.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)
HERKIMER, N. Y., Dec. 4.—As the fast mail train on the New York Central Railroad came thundering along towards the crossing here this morning Flagman Wolver discovered two young girls on the track apparently unaware of their great peril.

Wolver shouted, the girls looked, and when they saw the engine was almost upon them became bewildered, shrieked, but were too frightened to move.

The engineer blew the whistle and reversed his machine, but the train was going at such a high rate of speed that it was impossible to stop before the crossing was reached.

All this took but a moment. Wolver sprang to the spot, fairly threw the girls from the track, but before he could escape was caught by the engine and instantly killed. His body being horribly mangled.

Two lives were saved, but brave Wolver had lost his own.

O'CONNOR SOLD HIMSELF PRETTY CHEAP.

He Says Timothy Harrington Paid Him to Commit Outrages in 1880.

(BY CABLE TO THE PRESS NEWS ASSOCIATION.)
LONDON, Dec. 4.—In the Parnell Commission to-day Thomas O'Connor, son of a farmer near Castle Island, was on the witness stand, called by the Times.

He swore that Timothy Harrington, member of Parliament, paid him and himself the sum of £7 to commit outrages in 1880.
